TABLE OF CONTENTS

SECTION I: Introduction

Chapter

I. Introductory Note: The Negro Voter in the South................. 213

II. The Negro Vote in the Presidential Election of 1956......... 219
    Henry Lee Moon, Director, Public Relations, NAACP, New York City

SECTION II: Historical Background

III. The Political Legacy of Reconstruction......................... 231
    C. Vann Woodward, Professor of History, Johns Hopkins University

IV. "Legal" Disfranchisement of the Negro................................. 241
    John Hope Franklin, Professor and Chairman, Department of History, Brooklyn College

V. The Rise and Collapse of the "White Democratic Primary" 249
    Thurgood Marshall, Director-Counsel, NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, New York City

VI. Some Legislative Consequences of Negro Disfranchisement 255
    Robert C. Weaver, Administrator, Temporary State Housing Rent
    Commission, New York State

    and

    Hortense W. Gabel, Deputy Administrator, Temporary State Housing Rent
    Commission, New York State

SECTION III: The Negro Voter Outside of the South

VII. The Negro Voter in the Far West..................................... 262
    Loren Miller, Attorney-at-Law, Los Angeles, California

VIII. Negro Voting in a Border Community: Louisville, Kentucky 278
    Louis C. Kesselman, Chairman, Department of Political Science,
    University of Louisville
IX. The Negro Voter in Alabama
C. G. Gomillion, Dean of Students, Tuskegee Institute

X. Expansion of Negro Suffrage in Arkansas
Tilman C. Cothran, Chairman, Department of Sociology,
and
William M. Phillips, Department of Sociology, Arkansas A. M. and N. College

XI. The Expansion of Negro Suffrage in Florida
Elston E. Roady, Associate Professor of Political Science, Florida
State University

XII. The Negro Voter in Georgia Politics, Today
C. A. Bacote, Professor of History, Atlanta University

XIII. The Negro Voter in Louisiana
John H. Fenton, Instructor in Political Science, Tulane University

XIV. The Negro Voter in Mississippi
Earl M. Lewis, Chairman, Department of Political Science, Prairie
View A. and M. College

XV. Expansion of Negro Suffrage in North Carolina
I. G. Newton, Professor of Political Science, North Carolina College at Durham

XVI. The Negro Voter in South Carolina
James T. McCain, Associate Director, South Carolina Council on Human Relations, Columbia, S. C.

XVII. Expansion of Negro Suffrage in Tennessee
Preston Valien, Chairman, Department of Social Sciences, Fisk
University

XVIII. Expansion of Negro Suffrage in Texas
Henry Allen Bullock, Professor of Sociology and Chairman, Graduate Research, Texas Southern University

XIX. The Negro Voter in Virginia
Henry J. McGuinn, Chairman, Division of the Social Sciences
and
Tinsley Lee Spraggins, Professor of History, Virginia Union University
Section V: The Future of the Negro Voter

XX. The Future of the Negro Voter in the South
Florence B. Irving, Research Assistant, Southern Regional Council

XXI. The Future of the Negro Voter in the South
Donald S. Strong, Professor of Political Science, University of Alabama

XXII. The Future of the Negro Voter in the United States
Samuel Lubell, Political Analyst and Lecturer, Author of “Revolt of the Moderates,” and “The Future of American Politics”

XXIII. The Future of the Negro Voter in the South
James M. Nabrit, Jr., Professor of Law, Secretary, and Director of Public Relations, Howard University

XXIV. The Future of the Negro Voter in the United States
Roy Wilkins, Executive Secretary, NAACP, New York City