Table of Contents

Myths and Realities: African Americans and the Measurement of Human Abilities

Editor's Note
The Mounting Toll: Environment and the Loss of Young Talent .......................... 211
    Sylvia T. Johnson

Guest Editors' Comments
Not All That Bright ................................................................................................. 214
    John H. Stanfield, II, and Rutledge M. Dennis

Section I: Historical Considerations—Setting the Stage
The Myth of Race and the Human Sciences ....................................................... 218
    John H. Stanfield, II

The African American Critique of White Supremacist Science ......................... 232
    Carl C. Jorgensen

Section II: The Politics of Race and Science
Social Darwinism, Scientific Racism, and the Metaphysics of Race .................... 243
    Rutledge M. Dennis

For Whom Does the Bell Toll?: Meritocracy, the Cognitive Elite, and the Continuing Significance of Race in Postindustrial America .................................. 253
    Frank Harold Wilson

The Relativity of Genotypes and Phenotypes ...................................................... 267
    Charles Vert Willie

The Pseudoscience of Psychometry and The Bell Curve ...................................... 277
    Joseph L. Graves, Jr., and Amanda Johnson

Superior Intellect?: Sincere Fictions of the White Self ....................................... 295
    Hernán Vera, Joe R. Feagin, and Andrew Gordon

A Deconstructive Look at the Myth of Race and Motivation .............................. 307
    W. Curtis Banks, Gregory V. McQuater, and Janet L. Sonne
Section III: Policy Considerations
Beyond the Bell Curve: Toward a Model of Talent and Character Development ... 326
Serge Madhere

Cracks in the Bell Curve: How Education Matters ........................................... 340
Linda Darling-Hammond

The Measurement of Environments: A Follow-Up Study ................................. 354
Richard M. Wolf

Toward an Equitable System of Educational Assessment .................................. 360
Edmund W. Gordon

Rising Skill Levels and Declining Labor Force Status Among African American Males ................................................................. 373
Timothy Bates

Epilogue: Racism and Fascism
Racism and Fascism (an excerpt from the 1995 Howard University Convocation Address) ................................................................. 384
Toni Morrison

Cover: Skylar Byrd of Washington, D.C.'s Benjamin Banneker Academic High School, who received a perfect score of 1600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test in 1995 by following a straightforward regime: "I simply read, studied, did my work, and the rest fell into place." Photograph by Manuel Monterey, courtesy of Black Issues in Higher Education.